PRICE THREE CENTS

TRIPLETS' NAMES PROVE PUZZLE TO PROUD PARENTS

One Other Set of Triplets Has Been Born in County; Three Girls and All Are Living.

Birth of triplets to Mr. and Mrs. Luther I. Sachs, Hanover street, Friday, recalls to older residents of Adams county the three girls-born to Mr. and Mrs. Jared Tracey at Fountaindale, in 1886.

The three Tracey girls, all of whom are now married, had the unusual distinction of triplets in being able to celebrate separate birthdays, their births having taken place on three different days, April 4, 5 and 6, 1886.

The Tracey triplets are now Mrs. Victor McKelvey, Waynesboro; Mrs. Jesse Thompson and Mrs. Clay Willard, of Blue Ridge Summit.

Mrs. Emma Tracey, a one-arm woman, mother of the triplets, resides at Blue Ridge Summit. Mr. Tracey is dead.

The late Doctor Beaver, formerly of Fairfield, was the attending physician when the Tracey girls were born.

Mrs. Sachs, who gave birth to two boys and a girl, Friday morning, today was reported by her nurse as having passed a restful night, and to be considerably stronger today. The triplets are doing nicely, it was added.

Selection of names for the babes is puzzling the parents, it was stated, and no decision to that end had been reached this morning.

MOTORISTS MEET AT YORK SPRINGS

State Officers and Mr. Keith Give Short Talks on Motor Legislation Friday.

Gasoline tax and motor insurance legislation were discussed at a meeting of the motorists of York Springs, held in Bushey's hall, Friday night, by T. C. Rudderow, general manager of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, and E. D. McNelly, field secretary for the same organization. John D. Keith, president of the Gettysburg Motor club of Adams county, under whose auspices the meeting was held, also delivered a short talk. Ten directors of the local club attended the meeting.

Mr. Rudderow in his address dwelt on the inadvisability of having an additional gasoline tax to gain revenue for the state and also touched on the detrimental effect the proposed motor insurance law would have on the motorists. This measure provides for the issuance of licenses to only those persons who are able to show that they are able to supply $6000 in case of a damage suit.

Mr. Keith supplemented the remarks of Mr. Rudderow, pointing out that many motorists would be forced to dispose of their machines if such legislation were enacted.

Mr. McNelly, who was actively engaged in the organization of the local club, explained the purpose of the American Automobile Association with which the state federation and the local club are affiliated and showed how these three bodies can render service to the motorist, no matter where he may be.

Several members of the audience gave short talks and propounded a number of questions that had been bothering the motorists of that section of the county for sometime.

HITCHING YARD RELEGATED TO LIMBO OF NEGLECT AS AUTOS CARRY DEVOUT TO CHURCH

Automobile Has Caused Old Stables to Fall Into Disuse and With Their Passing Many Other Church Customs Went With Them; Friends Meeting House Still Boasts "Rack."

Witness the passing of the church stable!

Since automobiles have come into as common use in rural sections as urban communities of Central Pennsylvania, there is no longer any need for the old "hitchin' yard," not so many years ago a necessary adjunct to every rural place of worship.

Many of the long, low, wooden sheds have recently been razed to beautify the church surroundings, while others are rotting away in enforced idleness. One of the few remaining church stables in Adams county is that at the Friends' meeting house, Flora Dale, a church which traces its history back nearly 200 years. But the one-time stable is now used as a garage by members of the congregation, a concrete floor having replaced the straw bedding formerly used for horses.

A horse-drawn conveyance at a country church is now as much a rarity as an automobile was fifteen or twenty years ago, and it is a common sight to see from 25 to 100 machines, ranging from "flivvers" to expensive closed cars, parked around a country church during a service.

Improve Buildings
And with the passing of the church stable is noticed a change in the church properties themselves. Many rural churches, which have done away with their stables, have improved and beautified their surroundings, painted their edifices inside and outside, replaced more comfortable pews, re-styled wheezing hand-pumped organs with pianos and electrically-driven pipe organs and discarded coal oil lamps for electric lights.

Not so long ago when carriages were in vogue, the horses were unhitched and placed in the church stables while the families devoted themselves to several hours of Sunday school and church services. In fact, the greater part of Sunday was composed in worship and in making the journey to and from church. In those days the ministers preached at one church on a circuit of two or more only once every two or more weeks, spending a full day at each place on his charge.

Preach 3 Places
All that is changed now. Ministers with three charges are not infrequent in rural sections of Pennsylvania, but in almost every instance they preach, help with the Sunday school and perform other ministerial acts at each of their charges each Sunday, moving from one to the other by automobile and holding services in the morning, afternoon and evening.

Paid janitors have replaced the free-will caretakers, who in bygone winter days went to the church an hour earlier than the others to build new fires so that the place would offer a warm welcome to the worshippers and to see that all the lamps were filled with coal oil for the evening service.

One time-honored custom remaining is that of entertaining the minister on Sunday. Members of rural congregations still alternate in preparing bounteous meals for their spiritual advisors, but the practice of the minister spending the night among his parishioners has also slipped into the limbo of things forgotten.

Less Gossip Now
"Old-timers" regret the passing of the horse and carriage Sabbath, because, they say, with the automobile bringing people to church in time for the opening and whisking them away as soon as the benediction has been pronounced, no opportunity is given for the once-famous "grave-yard" discussions of news of the day, family gossip or crops.

It was a familiar practice, years ago, for the "men folks" to gather about the church, usually in the cemetery, between services, to talk and exchange ideas on a wide range of subjects, while the women grouped themselves indoors for discussions on matters pertaining to their households, gardens and flowers.

DR. FASTNACHT DIES AT YORK

Director of Seminary and Active in Lutheran Affairs For Many Years; Graduated Here.

The Rev. Dr. A. G. Fastnacht, graduate of Gettysburg college and the Lutheran theological seminary here, for fifty-two years a member of the West Pennsylvania synod and oldest active minister in York, died at his home at 6:30 o'clock, Friday evening. Infirmities of age were ascribed for his death. He was 81 years old.

He was born near Ephrata, Lancaster county, and entered the preparatory department of Gettysburg college in 1865. In 1870, he graduated from the college and three years afterward from the seminary. The Rev. Mr. Fastnacht received his doctor's degree here in 1902.

Doctor Fastnacht was married to Miss Mary E. Warren, of Gettysburg, June 10, 1873, a sister of Mrs. Luther Kuhlman, Carlisle street.

The deceased was a trustee of the Loysville orphans' home; a delegate to the general synod convention four times; a member of the historical and centenary committees of the synod; a director of the theological seminary; necrologist of the synod and president of the synod from 1889 until 1891. He was also president of the board of trustees of the York county academy.

AIMEE TOURS N. Y. NIGHT CLUBS

Evangelist Declares Patrons Are "Dancing Over the Trapdoor of Hell" After Visit.

(By Associated Press.) New York, Feb. 19.—Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, toured the night clubs of New York last night and found their patrons "dancing over the trapdoor of hell."

Mrs. McPherson, who arrived yesterday to open a three-day evangelistic campaign, made her night life tour after her first revival service. "Look at those eyes," she said as she spied a young woman in one of the smoky cellar cabarets of Greenwich Village.

"They are hard, hopeless. They are lost."

Girls had been dancing the Black Bottom around her table and two of them openly flirted with members of her escorting party. The evangelist party then turned northward to the more elaborate night clubs of Broadway. She appeared deeply impressed with life as it is lived by the night club patrons, far more impressed than the patrons and club owners seemed over her visit.

BIG FUNERAL IS PLANNED FOR RING

Dog Rescued From Cave to Have Elaborate Memorial Exercises; May Go To Museum.

(By Associated Press.) Woodruff, S. C., Feb. 19.—Elaborate memorial exercises are being planned by the Kelly brothers, Van and Harvey, over the body of Ring, prize foxhound, that was rescued early Thursday after 110 hours imprisonment.

Ring was taken out of a cave alive, but succumbed to an attack of pneumonia yesterday. The body was brought to a local undertaking establishment, embalmed, and has lain in state while hundreds viewed it. Funeral exercises within the next few days will be held at the mouth of the passage way into which Ring chased a red fox, killed it and later was trapped.

What will be done is uncertain. Neighbors are urging that it be buried in the cave. The Kelly brothers, however, favor offering it to some museum.

Historical Society, Once Flourishing, May be Given New Lease on Life Soon Preservation of Old Documents Is One of Many Aims of Organization to be Formed by Interested Citizens; Many Interesting Relics to be Found in This Section.

Gettysburg's history, antedating the period that made it a national shrine never to be forgotten, would be studied and the relics of the town's origin preserved in a collection, under the tentative plans of a small group of interested citizens, who are contemplating the formation of a historical society.

Gettysburg once had a historical society as the records of the Star and Sentinel of May 8, 1888, show, but its existence was of short duration and for a number of years it has all but been forgotten.

Now there has come a revival of interest in the early settlers, their struggles to conquer the wilderness to which their roving had taken them and their migration from one locality to another in search of what to them, seeking relief from the oppression of an overcrowded England or Holland, would be nearly "Utopian," and their dissatisfaction but their determination to stay.

Many Relics Exist
These early settlers, principally of Scotch-Irish descent, penetrated to this section early in the eighteenth century, and in their wake is to be found many relics, now all but priceless, and many documents which, for lack of good care, are slowly disintegrating.

The early society was formed in 1888 and an account of its formation appearing in the Star and Sentinel under the date of May 8 follows:

"The Historical society meeting in the Arbitration room yesterday evening (Monday evening, May 7, 1888) was encouragingly attended. The society organized by electing the following officers: President, Hon. Edward McPherson; first vice president, Henry J. Stahl; second vice president, J. S. Gitt; third vice president, Aaron Sheely; recording secretary, the Rev. J. K. Demarest; corresponding secretary, William McSherry, Jr., treasurer, Charles M. McCurdy; librarian, John L. Hill, Jr.; assistant librarian, John M. Krauth.

"The committee appointed to confer with the Gettysburg Athenaeum as to securing a room reported and the society accepted the proposition and authorized the committee to conclude the arrangements. The next meeting will be held in the Athenaeum on the evening of the first Monday of June."

The second meeting of the society was held on June 4, and at this meeting some continental currency and an old deed were turned over to the society. The Rev. Mr. Demarest and Charles M. McCurdy were requested at this meeting to prepare a paper on the history of Black's graveyard and present it at the next meeting, but whether this was done or not does not appear in any future account of the society.

Tells of Black's Graveyard
The fact that the Rev. Mr. Demarest had previously prepared a history of the Presbyterian church, in pamphlet form, however, is attested to by Dr. C. B. Stouffer, who has in his possession one of these pamphlets. The booklet, printed in 1876, gave a history of the church during its long existence.

In opening his discourse, the Rev. Mr. Demarest stated:
"Our first church building stood in the near vicinity of what is known as Black's Graveyard. By the kindness

AUTO WRECKED IN CRASH INTO TRAIN

A small sedan owned and driven by Charles Swope, Abbottstown, was badly damaged at 11 o'clock Friday night when Mr. Swope, driving east on Broadway, Hanover, ran the machine against a slowly moving freight train on the Western Maryland railroad tracks at the roadway crossing.

The front of the auto struck the train, the auto's bumper being bent double and the fenders bent, and the machine was thrown about so that the rear end collided with the freight car. The train, moving forward, smashed the rear of the body, broke the rear fenders and wedged the car into a depression at the side of the tracks. Railroad workmen and bystanders, aided by another auto, removed the damaged car to permit the train to proceed. No one was injured.

UPPER COUNTIANS IN TOUGH BATTLE

Arendtsville High Defeats Biglerville Boys 30 to 19; Girls Play Also.

Playing before the largest crowd of the season in the Biglerville auditorium, Friday evening, the boys' team of the Arendtsville vocational school defeated the Biglerville high school quintet, 30 to 19, but the girls' team of Biglerville defeated the Arendtsville co-eds by the score 16 to 10.

"PRESS STUFF"

An Anti-Suicide club with thirteen charter members has been formed at the University of Baltimore. Their motto is "Live and Let Live" and we suppose they are serious. But will prospective suicides be apt to join the organization? President Pearson of Maryland university knew what he was talking about when he said "American parents were digging graves for their children." Abnormal living certainly results in something akin to suicide and if the younger generation is living abnormally perhaps the older generation, the parents, are serving as prototypes for this abnormality. Gettysburg dramatic talent is to be given another opportunity for expression. The column was glad to see that Mrs. Capper would again appear on the local stage and that Mrs. Malone had consented to take a part. We have never seen Mrs. Malone on the stage but we dare say she will be exceptionally good. The column hopes that Horace Liveright will be successful in his effort to keep "The Captive" on Broadway. We have read the story and can see nothing improper in the story. If the theatres of New York are to be "cleaned" the cleaning process must come from within. A board of "cleaners" will never be able to complete the task. The fourteen student has committed suicide. This time the deed was done "by gas" at Elizabeth, N. J. "Complained of life's drabness" said the headlines in the press the next morning. Poor fellow, he should have signed up for economics.

Headline from "Public Ledger": "SENATE SPEEDS DAM BILL." How'bout the rest of the "dam" bills?

As soon as Kellogg annexes Nicaragua as an American province the Marines will be sent to China. It might be a good idea for him "to recognize" some Chinese goat milker as president of China so that he will have an excuse for our attack. The Chinese invented gunpowder so perhaps we will find out that they are learning to use it. Some of these days a Gettysburg theatre will install the talking moving picture. If the patrons continue as they have in the past we dare say the actors will get awfully mad at the competition. "We would pay fifty cents to attend a 'talking movie' of President Coolidge." We liked the new version of America's stock joke: "Who was that lady I seen you with?" "That's what I've been wondering."

Headline from "Public Ledger": "MABEL NORMAND BETTER" We hope they mean the acting of Mabel Normand.

LEBANON DOWNS HIGH FRIDAY

Pretzel Benders Trounce Maroon and White 42 to 33; John Harris Plays Here Tonight.

Lebanon high gave Gettysburg a rude jolt last night in the interscholastic league by administering a 42-33 setback to the Maroon and White basketballers. Gettysburg played a very poor brand of ball while Lebanon displayed a swift attack, which combined to give the locals a stinging defeat.

Lebanon opened the game with a spirited attack and swept far into the lead, at one time leading 11-1. Gettysburg braced and scored on sensational shots by Lightner, Buohl and Sadler. A foul toss by Lightner also scored for the Martintmen. At the end of the first ten minutes of play the pretzel benders held the long end of an 11-7 count.

In the second period the battlefield aggregation displayed their best form, if such it may be called. Sadler, Bream and Trostele sunk goals and enabled the Maroon and White dribblers to close the large gap. Issett and Light kept the home club ahead by sinking goals at opportune times. The lowly Lebanon team managed to hold the lead at half time, the score reading 20-17.

In the third period the Lebanon quintet maintained its upper hand by scoring consistently on goals by Miller and Emery. Miller added several fouls to the Lebanon score. Lightner, Buohl and Sadler uncorked shots from the floor to score for the Martintmen. The playing was fast and furious in this period and the Lebanon team held the edge. At the end of the third period Lebanon held a 30-25 lead.

In the final session the Lebanon team increased their lead by a speedy passing attack. Hoaster, Issett, Emery and Miller all located the basket from the floor in this period. Lightner, Buohl and Sadler looped shots for the Martintmen.

The Gettysburg team played its worst brand of ball in many days. The passing and shooting of the team was far below par. Joe Sadler led the scoring for the battlefield team by accounting for five double-deckers. Miller and Emery proved troublesome at all times to the Martintmen. Each caged four goals, Miller's phenomenal foul tossing proved a big handicap to the locals. Miller sunk eight out of ten tries from the free throw line.

Tonight the locals will endeavor to shake off the ragged playing of last night by decisively trouncing John Harris high. The John Harris foes are a greatly improved team and have been traveling at a swift pace recently. John Harris is counting heavily on winning tonight's fray and from all advance dope a real battle may be expected.

A change of time has been made for the starting of the games. The scrub game which was originally scheduled for 7 o'clock has been moved up to 6:30. The varsity game will start immediately after the close of the preliminary tilt. This change of time has been made on account of the dance which will be held on the gymnasium floor at the close of the games.

KILLINGER TO COACH AT POLY

Former Mentor at Dickinson to Go to Rensselaer Polytechnic Next Fall.

Troy, N. Y., February 19.—The athletic council today announced the appointment of Glenn Killinger, former Penn State College star athlete and Walter Camp's all-American halfback in 1921, as coach of Rensselaer Polytechnic institute football team. Killinger, who has been for three seasons assistant to the veteran Coach Hugo Bezdek at Penn State, will assume his new duties at Troy Tech the first of September and will prepare a team to open the schedule with Williams college on the Trop campus '86 field September 24 next. The new coach will succeed Coach Paul Graham who will hereafter devote his efforts to baseball and swimming.

Glenn Killinger won ten letters in football, baseball and basketball during his four years' college course at Penn State, and played two years at halfback and two years at quarterback, being captain of the eleven in 1921. He played freshman and varsity basketball for four years, being captain of the quintet in 1920. He was equally active in baseball during four campaigns. Out of 157 collegiate games in which he played but 16 were lost. Upon graduation Killinger became football coach at Dickinson college for a year and then returned to Penn State to assist Bezdek. Killinger was signed by the New York Yankees of the American league on closing his college career in 1922, but was subsequently sent to Jersey City, and for the last three seasons has been a player-manager in Class B professional baseball leagues. He also played some professional football last season.

Coach Killinger will retain Paul Eschholz, of Hartford, Conn., former captain and star halfback of Rensselaer Polytechnic institute eleven, as one of his assistants.

Killinger is well known here. He is married to Miss Wilda Holtzworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Holtzworth, East Broadway.

HISTORICAL

of one of your number I was enabled to visit the spot some weeks ago. I found it evidently suffering from neglect. The remains of not a few of the dead have been removed, and little care has been taken in some instances to fill again the graves. The wounds so made have a ghastly look and through them the consecrated ground seems to be still making some claim for what once committed to it by mourning friends, now themselves most of them passed away. One soon perceives, examining the epitaphs, that those which still answer their purpose not always the most recent. Some slabs with legible inscriptions are there that are almost a century and a half old; while others reared perhaps within a comparatively few decades are broken to pieces or fallen on their faces.

This graveyard is today in a worse state of decay, many of the stones being entirely missing and the others broken or else so covered with vines that the epitaphs have been eradicated entirely. In some instances the slabs, which had been placed on top of the graves, have sunk so that they are completely covered by earth and it is only with difficulty that persons interested in the burying ground can find the graves.

It is the intention of those interested in the project of a historical society to have some of these old places of interest marked, if possible, with a suitable tablet and preserve for posterity the landmarks of the early places of interest and note.

It has also been proposed that the old documents which are not being permitted to decay that have a direct bearing on the lives, customs and existence of the early settlers be collected, if possible, and preserved, where they can be studied by those interested in this history.

Two Officers Living

It has been suggested that a public museum be started in a centrally located place and that all of the relics which have a direct bearing on the early life in this section be collected and placed on display. Considering the fact that Adams county was one of the earliest places of settlement, inland, and that as far back as 1730, or even earlier, settlers made their homes here, it is thought that an interesting collection could be started.

Only two of the original officers of the historical society are living at present, J. L. Hill being the first librarian and Charles M. McCurdy, treasurer. Mr. Hill is at present a justice of the peace of Gettysburg and Mr. McCurdy, cashier of a bank at Bellefonte, this state. It is hoped that descendants of the members of the historical society can be prevailed upon to take an active interest in the reorganization of the society and that within a short time an active association can be built up.

"TRACKED BY THE POLICE," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

In France Jimmy Ford adopts an orphaned puppy, names it Rin-Tin-Tin and smuggles it home after the war. Murtagh, a crooked politician, covets Jimmy's sweetheart, Ruth Allen. Jimmy's father, a police lieutenant, is mysteriously murdered. Jimmy joins the force to avenge him. Jimmy has an able ally in Rin-Tin-Tin, now full-grown. Murtagh, hating and fearing Jimmy, has him assigned to the feared neighborhood of the Hudson Busters, a gang Murtagh secretly leads. The police declare the district a dead end; Jimmy, seeing some gangsters, approaches to order them out—

Together Jimmy and Rinty strode toward the corner, where half a dozen of the young toughs, who had but lately quit the headquarters of the Busters under Dan's orders to "get" Jimmy, were idling. The rowdies tried to make believe that they were paying no attention to his approach, when Jimmy needed but half an eye to warn him that they were sizing him up and down covertly and thoroughly.

He approached them steadily, calmly. When he drew close he noticed a sudden movement—to flank him obviously. He gave no sign of alarm—did not let on that he had noticed. But under his breath he whispered a word to Rinty to be alert. Rinty crowded close to Jimmy's legs and moved along in a bristly way.

The Busters had chosen their ambush spot well; it was a deserted corner in the center of Jimmy's beat, remote from the possible aid of the cops on the skirting beats.

When Jimmy and Rinty drew abreast of them, slowing down to meet them, eye for eye, the young fellows in a clumsy manner intended to appear accidentally jostled him. Jimmy managed his temper beautifully, stopped and inquired:

The Busters swarmed around him.

"What's the big idea? Ain't the sidewalk wide enough for you fellows?"
Bang! A heavy fist landed flush on the side of Jimmy's jaw. Crunch! A heavier boot landed squarely in the pit of Rinty's stomach.

Down, both of them, the cop dazed, the dog writhing in agony. A shower of kicks and fists, Jimmy doubled up and covered his head with his hands instinctively.

It looked like a certain and fearful beating for the two, new cop and cherished dog. A beating that would break the spirits—perhaps the backs—of both of them. Make them glad to never see the waterfront again.

The exuberant triumph of the Busters was suddenly checked, however, by an unexpected counter. Even as he gasped painfully for breath Rinty flashed his fangs in the morning light, ripping to the bone the leg of one of the gangsters who was about to kick him again.

Screaming in pain, the thug dropped to his hands and knees and tried to crawl away from the spot. His pals left off mauling Jimmy and sprang on Rinty. Now, however, these mongrel humans were to see and feel and know the stuff of which real thoroughbreds are made. As they rushed upon him Rinty struggled to his feet, sidestepped unsteadily, then struck with all the devastating force of a saw-toothed tornado.

The splendid recuperative powers of his huge body were quickly pulsing him back to normal strength and swiftness now. Snarling low and horribly, throwing his body around like a self animated scythe, he attacked the gangsters—one after another, all together.

A few onlookers gathered, running from all directions, popping into view seemingly by magic, as they will in even the most deserted localities when a fight starts. In horror and fear that they might be mistaken for a foe by the fighting dog, they remained at a respectful distance. But they witnessed a game, thrilling, fascinating exhibition of what the highly intelligent Rinty was capable of in the way of a combat against unequal odds.

With blackjacks and kicks and pistols the Busters swarmed around him. Rinty ducked the blackjacks, sidestepped the kicks and slashed so swiftly whenever a pistol was raised that the aim was spoiled. Thrashing with his body as an infuriated crocodile snaps its tail, he bowled over some; a neat little trick of thrusting his head between their legs and giving a quick flip and upturn to his body upset the others. Within a few bewildering moments after the beginning of the fight full blast every one of the gangsters was on the pavement, bleeding, crawling, frantically seeking one thing and one thing only—escape!

Meanwhile Jimmy, never for a moment forgetting the old captain's injunction to "keep cool," recovered his senses, clambered to his feet, unsheathed his blackjack and went to work in Rinty's aid. Soon the sidewalk was littered with as subdued a collection of tough guys, groaning out abjectedly in the ache of broken heads and mangled shins, as ever suffered from the ministrations of any strong arm squad.

Those who, taking advantage of Jimmy's insufficient supply of hand-cuffs, tried to escape were promptly worried back into the groveling group by Rinty's savage fangs.

"Watch 'em, Rinty, while I phone for the wagon!"

The amazed onlookers moved closer. They had been the startled witnesses of a sight unprecedented in the toughest section of Old Chelsea. The Hudson Busters, terrors of new cops, beaten and smashed and arrested—by a lone man and his dog! Wonderful, incredible day! Was the reign of these roughnecks at an end at last? The honest citizens amongst the onlookers ejaculated fervent thanks to the cop and Rinty. But one there was who was a spy, and he sped away toward the gang's headquarters with this most disconcerting news.

The "wagon" came a-belling. The handful of reserves who jumped out looked upon the scene with even greater amazement than had the citizens. Sergeant Mulcahy beamed at the somewhat battered, but grimly exultant, Jimmy and said:

"A good start, lad. Maybe 'twill teach these bums to respect you, and you'll have no further trouble."

"The whole credit belongs to Rinty," said Jimmy honestly.

"Do you and Rinty want to be relieved to get your bumps doctor?"

"Not a bit of it," snapped Jimmy. "We're just beginning to enjoy ourselves!"

The gangsters, cowering, as gangsters always will, under the sheer weight of guardian blue, made Jimmy the target of their baleful, hateful glares. He returned the compliment with cool contempt.

"We weren't doin' nothin'," whined one of the bullies, "when this guy comes along an' picks a scrap with us. Wait until Mr. Murtagh hears about this. We'll complain to him, an' he'll get the commissioner to settle this smart b—"

"Can it be that the fine Mr. Murtagh is a friend of the likes of you?" asked Jimmy sarcastically. The bully fidgeted. "Well, I know him, an' he's a friend of everybody who gets into trouble when it ain't their own fault."

"Just tell him, then, if he's so much the good angel of the Hudson Busters that Jimmy Ford is the cop who made the arrest. He'll be doubly interested then."

The fine and personal bite of this was not wholly lost on the gangsters and the delighted cops who now rode off with them in the wagon. Jimmy, left with Rinty on the triumphant battlefield, shared with the frisking dog the adulations of a small crowd of longshoremen.

But as Jimmy smiled at the crowd and walked off with Rinty his thoughts were not concerned with this flashing glory, except in so far as the episode impressed him as a most auspicious start for his long quest of vengeance. Somehow inside he felt vastly encouraged that the fortunate turn of this first encounter with the Hudson Busters augured the eventual success of his heart and soul entrenched purpose to unearth and track down the murderer of his father.

Long ago the honest folk of Chelsea had ceased to think about that mysterious crime. With the lay public at large it had followed the usual course of such nine day sensations. But with the police, and with Jimmy Ford in particular, it was a matter of always fresh personal and professional interest. Jimmy felt to thinking deeply of it as he walked along. Always he connected Murtagh with the deed. But he knew no motive that would lead Murtagh to either commit or inspire the murder. Knew nothing, except his own suspicions and the suspicious his father had always had of the man. But—suspicions made poor juice for the electric chair!

32 Dead In Storm That Sweeps South

New Orleans, Feb. 19.—The known dead from the tornado which dipped freakishly into widely separated sections of three states Thursday night rose to thirty-two last night with the discovery of an additional body near Pleasant Hill, Louisiana, and the drowning of a man at Alexander City, Alabama.

The number of injured neared the 100 mark and property damage, largely confined to farm homes and rural buildings, passed $200,000.

Rescue workers, delving through debris of farm homes, faced the possibility of freezing temperatures. Winds had lost their fury but brought with them the touch of ice. The tornado dissipated in rains and electrical storms.

Of the storm dead, twelve died in the farming community near Pleasant Hill. Eleven were known dead in Texas parish, in the Mississippi Valley. Eight were killed at Rose Hill, Mississippi. One man drowned at Alexander City, Alabama, when his boat was upset by high winds.

NEW SPRING STRAWS

The spring straw hats reached London before the winter snows.

The new model straws maintain the vogue of the high crown, but hard lines are eliminated by the clever use of fancy effects in straw and the addition of taffeta and ribbon. Brims are more pronounced whether they droop prettily over the face or turn up urban fashion. A novelty in straw is the beehive shape with black satin ribs.

The milliners in popularizing straws are also introducing more colors. Some are in rose pink, swathed in taffeta, others in orange colored straw and interwoven colors.

Maryland Beaten Biscuits

REAL aristocrats of the bread family are Maryland Beaten Biscuits, delicate, fine grained, lightly browned. And they aren't hard to make, either; a few minutes brisk beating is the chief work required to prepare them for the oven. A good gas range does the rest—turns out dainty morsels that melt in your mouth. Try this old southern recipe. It's been handed down from Mother to Daughter since long before the war.

Maryland Beaten Biscuits

1 pint flour
1-3 cup lard
1 teaspoon salt
Milk and water in equal quantities.

Mix and sift flour and salt. Work in lard and moisten to a stiff dough. Toss on a slightly floured board and beat with rolling pin thirty minutes continually folding over the dough. Roll one-third inch in thickness, cut out, and prick with fork. Place on a buttered tin and bake in a hot oven to a light brown.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

TEN YEARS AGO
Rupp-Nixon.—Daniel A. Rupp, of York, and Miss Marie Teal Nixon, of Collingswood, New Jersey, were married at Collingswood on Wednesday. Mr. Rupp formerly attended Gettysburg college and later conducted a haberdashery store with L. E. Enteline in the room now occupied by the Gas Company office.
Leaves Flag to Church.—The will of Miss Agnes McCreary, who died here last week, leaves to the Presbyterian church a small silk flag which was used here at the time of the dedication of the Soldiers' National cemetery. The Baltimore Glee club, which sang at the exercises, were entertained at the McCreary home, and the flag was used by their leader to keep time for the singing. Ever since it has been treasured by members of the McCreary family.

Fastnacht Day.—The long established custom of eating fried cakes on Shrove Tuesday was followed in many homes in Gettysburg today.
These fried cakes are known among the Pennsylvania Germans as fastnacht cakes and the custom of baking and eating them was introduced in southeastern Pennsylvania by early settlers from several of the Germanic states now embraced in the Germanic states. The name fastnacht was applied to the cakes because they usually constitute the fare of the frugal Germans on the eve of Lent. This is a custom that dates back to the Middle Ages.

Van Dyke Night.—The first meeting of the St. James' Literary Society this year was held in the chapel Tuesday evening. The works of Van Dyke were studied. The following program was given: "The Lost Word," Rev. J. B. Baker; Biography of Dr. Van Dyke, Rev. A. A. Bruchhaus; "The Christmas Angel," N. E. Cooper; "His Other Engagement," Edgar J. Eyer; "The Other Wiseman" illustrated by forty beautiful slides, Ivan Hagedorn.
The works of Whittier will be given at the next meeting.

Back to This County.—Rev. Will W. Whalen, formerly assistant rector at St. Francis Xavier church, has been transferred from an assistant rectorship at Shamokin to St. Ignatius church, Buchanan Valley, succeeding Rev. J. C. Foin, who goes to Middletown.

Gave Good Program.—The pupils of the parochial schools gave a delightful entertainment in celebration of Washington's birthday, Wednesday afternoon. It was held in Xavier Hall and included a number of patriotic songs by the school, Miss Ruth Smith playing the accompaniments. Rev. W. F. Boyle made an appropriate address.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE AVERAGE

IF all of us strove to rise above the average, I am wondering what would become of this average?
Relatively each one of us is not such a high order of human being. We hug the crowd too closely. The crowd is made up of leaderless minds. It's someone outside the crowd that leads the crowd.
But often it only takes a spark from the blazing forge of a leader's mind to touch the hidden gunpowder in some willing, hopeful, determined soul, arousing sleeping talents and really lifting the man or woman to his or her natural stature.
Take the average player in a game. It only takes just a little more hard work, attention, concentration, patience—often a little sacrifice—to get out of that average and become a Champion, or, better still, a player with Champions!
The thing that should constantly prod us should be the idea that only as we adequately express ourselves are we really worthy of our place.
All too often it takes more than what we are in ourselves to be truly expressive. We need the understanding sympathy, the overlapping patience of one or more believers. Especially at the inception of great tasks.
And it is this thing of believers in us that lifts us above the average and gives to us the zest for leadership and for creative thought and initiative in our daily lives.
We get our cues from the average, but we must always look to those who have demonstrated their courage by putting their ideas to the test, and taking a stand that may be unpopular for the time, but nevertheless, ideas that have been born through the urge of a warm and brave heart.
Choose for your friends and companions those who lift and inspire you. Never be satisfied to be an average man or woman. Keep climbing higher!

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

WHAT BRIDGE WHIST CAN DO
In one brief moment he forgot
The tender promises he'd spoken,
The love which never should be broken,
The moonlight and the garden spot,
The rapture of her whispered "yes,"
Which flooded him with happiness.

In one swift moment from his mind
Flew every tender thought and gentle
Uttered when he was sentimental,
The pledge to love her and be kind,
The vow beneath that starry sky
That he for her would gladly die.

In one sad moment, red with hate
At her he furiously spluttered,
Said things he never would have uttered
To her beside that garden gate
A few brief years ago, when he Pleaded with her his bride to be.
Queer things we are! In love we sigh
And vow we'll cherish her forever,
Defend her, but offend her never.
She marries us, and by and by
We almost drive her from the place
Merely because she trumps an ace.

Snappy Paragraphs

In order that he may start out with renewed energy and determination this spring, Silo Kildew has asked the Horse Doctor to prescribe a good tonic for him.

The Tickville barber says when a woman comes in and does not know exactly how she wants her hair trimmed he looks at her neck and if she has a slim one he tells her the round bob is all the rage and if she has a fat neck, he says nobody is using anything except the square ones.

There hasn't been a Shakespeare play at the Wild Onion school house in so long it is believed he is dropping out as a playwright.

Ivan Erickson, a 2-year-old boy of Pierre, S. D., now weighs 105 pounds, although he weighed only 9 pounds when he was born.

Pretty soon, as the Luckysnowbille rolled along with dear Uncle Lucky, Little Miss Mousie and Auntie Hen, all of a sudden the old gentleman rabbit exclaimed, "There's Peter Pig in his donkey gig!" Sure enough, maybe 500 hops ahead, as they measure distance in Rabbitland, rattled the fat pig's creaky wagon.

"Did you get any Valentines?" asked the old gentleman rabbit, slowing up alongside the donkey gig. "What's that?" asked Peter Pig, raising his worsted cap, which had been drawn well down over his ears to keep out the cold. "What's that?" "Did you receive any Valentines?" asked Uncle Lucky, with a wink at Auntie Hen.

"Sure I did," replied the old pig, with a grunt. "A comic one. Made Mrs. Pig and me laugh for half an hour." "Well, I declare," exclaimed Uncle Lucky. "A laugh once a day keeps the doctor away. What did you do with your Valentine?" "Framed it. It's hanging on the wall," answered Peter Pig.

"You don't say," chuckled Uncle Lucky. "Yes, I do," continued Peter Pig. "The picture on it looks just like me. Mrs. Pig says it's as good as a portrait," and Peter Pig smiled at Little Miss Mousie and Auntie Hen as he explained to them what sort of a Valentine it was. "Well, if you can guess who sent it, I'll give you a Lettuce Leaf Dollar Bill," laughed the old gentleman rabbit.

"You!" answered Peter Pig, just like that, quick as the wind that blows off your hat. Goodness me, what a surprised person was Uncle Lucky. Surprised and delighted, for he was just aching to give the poor old pig something really nice, you know, not just a comic Valentine.

"Here's your money," sighed the old gentleman rabbit, making believe he was sorry to lose. "Here's your money, Peter Pig. You're a good guesser. Next election I'm going to ask you who'll be President," and with a honk of the horn, away sped funny Uncle Lucky in the Sledmobile, with Auntie Hen and Little Miss Mousie all smiles and giggles.

By and by, after a while and a snowy mile, they came in sight of the dear Old Bramble Patch. "There's my bunny nephew!" shouted Uncle Lucky, and the next minute he stopped the Luckysnowbille at the little gate in the white picket fence.

"Did you get my Valentine?" asked the little rabbit, anxiously. "Ha, ha," laughed the dear old gentleman rabbit. "Which one, I mean, what was the verse?"

"Well, I shall never feel blue after this," promised dear Uncle Lucky, hopping out to help Auntie Hen and Little Miss Mousie step down. "Where's Lady Love, bunny boy?" "In the kitchen baking an Angel Cake," answered the little rabbit, skiptoeing up the winding path through the brambles just ahead of Uncle Lucky. "That sounds mighty appetizing," chuckled the funny old gentleman bunny.

A pretty Valentine will make, the next minute he exclaimed, as pretty Lady Love opened the kitchen door.
"Come right in," she said with a smile. "Take off your bonnet, Auntie Hen. And your hat, Little Miss Mousie. We'll all have tea," and hopping over to the little black stove, she took out the Angel Cake, done to a turn.
"I was going to send it to you as a Valentine," she said, turning to dear Uncle Lucky. "But you won't mind if we cut it now?"
"Not in the least," laughed Uncle Lucky, "I'm hungry as a wildcat." And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Pennsylvania's mine inspectors have probably the most hazardous work of any state employees. There are 55 inspectors who work among the approximately 2,500 mines in the state and in the last four years they made more than 33,000 inspections, besides acting as key men in all accidents. When any catastrophe occurs the district inspector immediately is called and he leads in the rescue work.
